From COVID-19 crisis to new pathways for a sustainable tourism in the Adriatic and Ionian Area

13 June, 2023 - Corfu Holiday Palace, Corfu (Greece)

09:30 - 17:00h (EEST)

Mode of delivery: hybrid (on-site and online)

Working languages: English, Greek, Italian, Croatian

It is no mystery that the SARS-CoV-2 pandemic has put the global economy to the test of numerous new challenges: the economic, health and sociological crisis has brought above all a huge stop to the tourism and transport sector, representing the 10 % of world GDP, thus leading governments around the world to run for cover.

However, the pandemic has also brought with it an opportunity, the renewal of a sector that has been stationary for several years.

From the statement of 1 December 2022 by UNWTO Secretary General, Zurab Pololikashvili and European Union Commissioner for Transport, Adina Vălean, *“The restart of tourism, therefore, presents us with a unique moment to seize opportunity from crisis [...]now is the time to capitalise on such shifts in behaviour and direct our sector on a different path, one that leads to a more sustainable and resilient future”*¹.

It is not possible then to talk about tourism without talking about transport: this is what emerges through the documentation drawn up by various European bodies and institutions.

The event intends to analyse tourism and transport from the voices of the highest representatives of the sector, to then focus on EUSAIR state of art and particular means of transport, currently among the most polluting: the cruise sector.

SECOND SESSION: SUSTAINABLE CRUISING

The Adriatic Ionian Region has its roots in the sea: more than 1/3 of its territory consists of its two sea basins.

The "seaways" are in fact the busiest in recent years, leading to an exponential increase in the costs of transported goods: it is therefore of primary interest to try to decongest the ports, by looking for new ways to develop greener routes, perhaps suitable for use of ports that are less developed today, also connecting them to new sustainable tourism pathways.

The Round Table brings together institutions, companies, ports and cities with the aim of observing the difficulties and opportunities from the various points of view of the sector.
